Telephones need roots to grow on

A telephone's "roots" are the many pieces of equipment necessary for connection and transmission of voices. Without these "roots"—cable, wire, switchboards, and other equipment—your telephone is useless, expansion of service impossible. At present, lack of this necessary "root" equipment is delaying our providing service for everyone still waiting. Until we do obtain it, we can only provide such new service as our present limited facilities can handle.

The Sun Again Shines

AGAIN THE SUN is shining over at Pembroke, and the world is happy and gay—at least for Editor Frank Miller and his friends. He told about it in the most recent issue of his paper, and made easy to understand the emotions of his heart.

Boiled down to definitions, Frank has begun to climb back up the mountain again after a season of mental and financial gloom. There are forces which count with most men, and Frank is like most men—except he is more of it and quicker most of the time.

Some weeks ago this paper used the word "ubiquitous," and explained that it was used with reference to a mosquito. The dictionary definition of the word is given as meaning "present in many places at the same time." And the word belongs to Frank exactly as it does to a mosquito. Last week he was in Washington on a public mission (in company with a group of state legislators who have been shown to have received from the state $200 each as part compensation for their special services), and as he rode along the learned over his radio that the supreme court had turned out the Talmadge regime in Atlanta, under which regime Frank had recently been dowsed from a mere or less desirable state job. At that information Frank rubbed his eyes, dozed clean clothes, put on his political smile and headed for Atlanta. There, he says, he was told that the job remained his and that the man who had been designated to succeed him was out in the cold.

So Frank is back in harness. In the meantime he had resigned from the office of mayor Pembroke when two members of council belonging to his faction were defeated for re-election. Frank admitted that life had temporarily gone behind a cloud of gloom that it seemed the sun would never shine again for him.

Now he is back on the road to joy. Now is the next thing we expect to hear from him is that he is having a birthday party, and is inviting all those who had contributed to his gloom; that he has again been elected mayor of Pembroke, and that the sun is shining along his pathway day and night.

That's Frank Miller. He's as ubiquitous as a mosquito any day or night.

What's In a Name?

WE ARE SOMETIMES moved to wonder why business men seek to mystify the individuality of their business enterprises by the adoption of high-sounding names without even the slightest indication as to its personality.

If you start to look in a directory for the name of a head of any business, you instinctively turn to that letter of the alphabet with which his name begins. Even if you don't know the man's initials you can usually establish identity by some analysis or process of elimination. When a man introduces himself, the purpose of introduction is to establish a mutual understanding. If he has adopted a vague, high-sounding name, it may be pleasing and harmonious, but it often fails to otherwise fails to meet the essential requirement of identification.

Recently the telephone operator—it was some months ago—phoned to this office as a bureau of information (which it is not) to inquire about the delivery of a telegram which she had received addressed to a motor or tractor or car company—something like that—and she didn't know where to send the telegram, because she didn't know by what name had been adopted. We told her we were as much in the dark as she. Later she told us that the telegram was for a concern within less than a block from this office. We knew the operator, and he was our friend and patron—but we hadn't become familiar with his business title.

Last week we had some sort of special business with a friend who is the head of a new enterprise in Statesboro. In the phone book we bought his name, but it was not there. We had forgotten the exact title under which he had chosen to operate (by which he was consulting his personality), so we phoned to somebody in an adjoining office who could tell us the title of his business. And that neighbor gave us the title wrong. There was in the title the meaningless word "Modera" or "Model," which could apply to any one of the dozen or more enterprises which have sprung up in Statesboro in recent months.

If the fellow had used his own name instead of that impersonal word we would have recognized his identity without calling for assistance. Now, don't think we are opposed to modernity; we favor up-to-date names, but when we do business with people, we like to know who it is we are trying to talk to about business—and we like to be able to find the name in the directory so we can recognize the head of the enterprise. Do you understand us? We're not angry, nor smart; just dumb and dismayed.

A Three-Color Light

IN THE VERY CENTER of Statesboro, high up above the driving thoroughfare, a traffic light which is designed to contribute to the safety of life and property of those who pass that way. There are four faces to this light, and each face shows three distinct colors—red, yellow and green. Most persons passing have learned the significance of these colors, and generally are governed by them. Red means "stop," yellow, "get ready," and green means "go." These colors are clear and easy of understanding, and in the main travelers willingly assent to be controlled by them.

But as we stood the other day on the east side, which showed red, we saw a car drive under the light from the south—and when we dared to chide the driver about this infraction he insisted that the face toward him showed green. And he was right.

As we stood there philosophized upon the fact that most of the answers to right and wrong in life depend upon the viewpoint of the man who is looking for the right to proceed. We recognized that a red light on the east and west left a green light on the north and south, and that the light which stopped one, gave another the right to go ahead. And then we reasoned that the same truth exists with reference to the affairs of life—the light which showed red from one point is the same that showed green from another point. And pursuing the soliloquy we remembered that inherently the light from both viewpoints was clear and bright. The color which each man sees is influenced by a condition entirely apart from the real light. There have been placed colored lenses between the driver and the clear light, and the glass on one side told the driver it was red, while on the other side it showed green.

Thus what both men saw was not exactly the truth. There are intervening causes which affected the color which each man seemed to see. But what does that have to do with affairs of today?

Well, recently there have been incidents about which people of Georgia—some sincere in their interpretation of right and others disregardful of the right—vehemently differed. Some honest men believed that law permitted (even directed) the designation of Herman Talmadge as governor of Georgia. And they argued that the law to that effect showed the way—a green light. Other men asserted that the light was green in Thompson's favor—and that he had the right of way. And as we stood there and studied those things, we realized that colors of right and wrong are largely influenced by intervening conditions which do not always reflect the absolute truth.

And then we reasoned that seven judges of the supreme court—men chosen for their uprightities and because of their capacity to interpret the lights before them—had been called upon to render deliberate, unbiased judgment upon the issues in dispute—and they had made their pronouncement, not governed by prejudice or favoritism, but with a superior understanding of the true intention of the law governing.

So we say here, don't denounce any man as dishonest and crooked merely because he is a light different from the way it appears to you.

Farm Bureau Executive Attending Conference of Vital Importance Today

H. L. Wingate, Georgia Farm Bureau executive, is in Chicago this week attending a meeting of the board of directors of the American Farm Bureau Federation. He left Macon headquarters of the farm organization Sunday, it was announced this week.

Facing the AFBF directors this week are a number of matters of vital interest to Georgia farmers. Mr. Wingate stated, and the action of the national Farm Bureau officials will be transmitted to agricultural leaders of the congress where various measures are being considered at the present time. Members of the board came from every section of the nation and there are five from the Southern Region comprising thirteen states. In addition to Mr. Wingate, other southern members are J. Walter Hammond, Texas; Ransom Aldrich, Mississippi; R. E. Short, Arkansas; and R. Flake Shak, North Carolina.

Upon his return to Georgia on March 31, Mr. Wingate will fly to Brownsville, Texas, to deliver the principal address at a district meeting of the Farm Bureau on April 2. He will return immediately to Macon for a series of addresses in Georgia prior to a special meeting of the GFBF board of directors on April 15-16.

Members of the directorate are: First District, A. M. Norman, Dover; and W. H. Smith Jr., Statesboro; Second District, C. K. Cox, Camilla; and P. B. Ingram, Bainbridge; Third District, Joe W. Cannon Jr., Cordele; and W. J. McKemie, Coleman; Fourth District, George C. Gaisert, Griffin; Fifth District, G. S. Potts, Conyers; Sixth District, R. L. Hogan, Dublin; and Mel J. Tamm, Sandersville; Seventh District, W. M. Storey, Summerville; Eighth District, W. L. Miller, Lakeland; and A. L. Holland, Jessup; Ninth District, R. L. P. Carter, Commerce; Tenth District, G. C. Williams, Cumpston, and John F. McMillan, Hartwell.

The matter of membership will demand attention of the Farm Bureau officials at the Macon meeting. H. R. Yandle, director of public relations, stated this week, and plans will be made for membership campaigns designed to reach the state quota of 70,000 farm families this year.

Wilson E. Still, director of the organization, is spending this week in North Georgia in the interest of the program, and he plans a tour of South Georgia within the next few weeks to contact officials in charge of county and community chapters. The new GFBF official is meeting with encouraging response in connection with their Farm Bureau movement.

International Harvester
announces $20,000,000 price reductions

We believe there is nothing more important to this country than to lower the prices of the goods that people buy.

The American people have insisted that the government withdraw from its attempts to control prices in peacetime. That places the responsibility where it belongs—in the hands of business and industry. Not all business can reduce prices now. Not all can reduce by the same amount.

Our company has felt a duty to act as promptly as possible. In our case, the business outlook now makes it possible to move toward the goal of lower prices. The only way out of the vicious circle of higher and higher prices is to break through.

We have taken this step not because of present competitive conditions but because of a drop in demand from customers. We have taken it because of our belief that ANY PRICE IS TOO HIGH IF IT CAN BE REDUCED.

These reductions, which will save (30 used) of our products approximately $20,000,000 a year, will become effective before April 1, and will apply to a selected list of tractor, farm machine, motor, truck, and industrial power products. Since we lose money on a few of our products, and barely break even on some others, these reductions will not apply to our entire line. Reductions will be made individually on products. Some will be cut more than others. Exact details will be announced as soon as possible.

Our ability to maintain this lower level of prices will depend in part on what happens to the prices and flow of materials that we buy from others. Because we believe price reduction is vital, we are willing to assume the risks that are involved.

These benefits to customers will depend, long, on uninterrupted production at reasonable wage levels. This is not a program that can be carried out if it is hampered by strikes or work stoppages.

Our employees have had substantial increases in pay, and wage questions are currently being discussed with many of the unions with which we deal. Stockholders have recently had an increase in dividend rate. Having considered the interests of these two groups, we are now making these price reductions for the benefit of the third group—our customers.

Business, to our way of thinking, has a social as well as an economic responsibility. This company has long followed the policy of operating in the interests of three groups—its customers, its employees and its stockholders. The duty of the management is to see that equal justice is done as between the three groups.

This price reduction program is another demonstration of our policy in action.

Taxes! Taxes! Taxes!

Who must pay TAXES? The Temperance League and the Bootlegger will not help you.

Both Bulloch County and the City of Statesboro are levying an extra tax on the sale of liquors in order to raise money to operate on.

Approximately $75,000.00 are being paid in from the legalized sales of whiskey now sold in Bulloch county. When you sign one of those cards sent you by the Temperance League, you are helping to lose this income — and which means more taxes for you to pay.

When tax-paying time comes you will not be able to locate the Temperance League nor the Bootlegger.

To vote Bulloch County dry, will make it a rich spot for the sale of Bootleg Whiskey without any income to the people of Bulloch County in Taxes.

Additional expenses will have to be paid to maintain a county police force to control the sale of illegal whiskey.

Bulloch County is enjoying now a most orderly condition in reference to violations of the law — and there is more respect for legalized control of the sale of liquors than will ever be maintained under bootleg conditions.

Let's maintain a lawful control of liquor sale in Bulloch County.

ASSEMBLY FAILS PROVIDE REVENUE

Leaves Acting Governor Under Necessity To Curtail State's Proposed Services

Adjourning since the day after a seventy-day session devoted chiefly to efforts to further the cause of the temperance league, the Georgia General Assembly failed to provide for the proposed revenue measure. The legislature, which was called into session by Governor M. E. Thompson, adjourned today without having passed any revenue measure. The assembly passed no measure to appropriate money for the expanded services pledged in the 1946 political campaign, and failing to enact any new revenue measure left Governor M. E. Thompson without sufficient money to meet commitments to school teachers and other educational employees.

The closing hours of the session saw belated action upon a heavily amended "home rule bill" that will apply to 103 counties and passage of a measure to provide a twelfth grade for Georgia's public schools.

Gov. Thompson reassured Georgia teachers that he would provide the funds for their 50 percent pledged salary increase, although this will involve the stripping of many essential state services and the non-fulfillment of the Democratic party's pledge of more money for roads, colleges, institutions, the aged, the tubercular, and for erecting new farmers' markets.

Talmadge leaders in the assembly blocked early in the session and consideration of any revenue measure except the sales tax bill, which eventually passed and was sent to the senate. Debate was in progress when the decision of the Georgia supreme court, holding Gov. Thompson's succession valid and the Talmadge forces aligned themselves against the only remaining revenue measure and left the Thompson administration funds to expand services. The senate failed to consider the appropriations act, which involved expenditures of more than $38,000,000 in excess of anticipated state income.

Governor Thompson promptly announced that the pledge to the teachers, joined in every campaign for governor and lieutenant-governor in the regular Democratic primary of 1946, would be carried out. This is expected to entail a policy of curtailment in other agencies, and hopes for increased payments to old-age pensions and dependent children are expanded rural road program, new farmers' markets and expansion of the tubercular hospital were abandoned by most state leaders. Highway expenditures probably will be cut sharply as a result of the failure to provide new revenues.

Responsible state leaders joined in urging the assembly to recess until the court decision, but the house leadership, dominated by the Talmadge-Harris forces, rejected this plan and most of the assembly's time was expended upon political measures, debate on the succession case, and lengthy week-end adjournments.

Governor Thompson is not expected to recall the assembly to consider any revenue measures, but will carry out his economy plan and endeavor to finance the state under the old appropriations act, which continues in effect and which is within the limits of state income. He appealed to all agency heads to support his economy proposals so that the crisis in the common schools may not become more acute and that he may personally carry out the major party pledge abandoned by his opposition.
